OVERVIEW

Alan Charkey is Counsel in the Subrogation Department, practicing in the field of insurance subrogation. He focuses his practice on researching, briefing and handling matters of unusual complexity, including appellate issues and questions of insurance coverage, both for himself and for his colleagues within the department.

Alan's reported decisions include Alderwoods \(Pennsylvania\), Inc. v. Duquesne Light Company, 106 A.3d 27 (Pa. 2014). In Alderwoods, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court held that after a power outage, an electric utility having knowledge of a defect in the customer's electrical equipment is under a duty either to inspect the equipment or to warn the customer prior to restoring service. Alan briefed the case and argued the case before the Supreme Court. Ultimately, the court found in favor of White and Williams' position despite opposition from the defendant and other industry interests.

The court's opinion is a major development in the law of negligence by public utilities. For decades, public utilities in Pennsylvania had successfully asserted that they were categorically under no duty to a customer when restoring service. The opinion deprives the utility industry of such a blanket defense.

Alan has extensive experience in coverage litigation, both on behalf of insurers and, in support of his subrogee clients, in opposition to liability insurers for wrongful denials of coverage. He also handles commercial disputes not involving insurance.

Prior to starting his law career in 1998, Alan worked as a claim adjuster and supervisor for three major insurers over the course of thirteen years.
